I'm not the expert, but that's what I demanded as a merit counselor. February 6, 2014 - Scouter Paul@Ed - #4a says two dinners, a lunch and a breakfast - are 4 meals. #6a says breakfast and dinner - it's 2 meals. #7d says breakfast, lunch and dinner - it's 3 meals. So I would say a total of 9 meals, with 3 needed to fulfil #7d. February 6, 2014 - John Prattit seems to me that people are taking the How Many Cookies approach I can steal and still go to Heaven for the new Culinary Merit Badge. Like all merit badges, the idea is to give knowledge and perfect a Planning, preparation, handling and cooking are the keys to learning. You also learn what happens if you violate any of these concepts in the injury/illness that may result. Learn the skills and by preparing and cooking a couple of extra meals just for good measure. Once the point of Cooking Merit Badge is to give you the skills to cook safely go the extra mile. You're not just passing on the badge you're preparing for the future. Did you have lunch? -)Mar 16, 2014 - ScouterChrisMar 16, 2014 - Scouter Paul@Chris - The silver culinary merit badge is available now. Apr 15, 2014 - Darcy DidionWith the new #7 is cooking on a walk. Can this be on a family walk or does it need to be done on a troop walk? Apr 15, 2014 - Scouter Paul@Darcy - The requirement does not specify. The scout should discuss this with his counselor when he is completing requirement 7b to ensure that he meets the counselor's expectations. Jun 27, 2014 - LV300This I had to really work to do it. I was in a group with five other kids who would be 18 in the next two months. (All were born in July). I had to update myself because the counselor said he would stop advising until next year in April and I couldn't wait that long, so it was a tough time, but I got it. I really liked this and I'm glad they decided to make it Eagle Required. Jul 28, 2014 - The number of requirements of this merit badge seems to outnumber the advance requirements for Tenderfoot, 2nd and 1st Class. (don't remember the Star), as well as the Camping Merit Badge (i.e. 8d: Cook at least one breakfast, lunch and dinner for your patrol of the meals you planned for the 8c requirement. Do the boys need to repeat each of these things again in order to pass the M.B. Kitchen or make these counts for the M.B. Cooking as well as the Camping (It reads almost the same as Cooking 4b except that the Kitchen needs one more dinner). Some of the requirements (such as for the first-class kitchen requirement) seem superfluous to repeat the thing to me. Are they mutually exclusive to pass? July 28, 2014 - Scouter Paul@Carol - If the scout is working in Camping, First Class and Cooking, and can convince his merit counselors that the meals he plans to use will meet the individual requirements, then there is no stipulation that a meal cannot be counted for advancement and both merit badges. If a scout came to me for the culinary merit badge and said, Yes, I cooked these meals last year for First Class, I would tell him Congratulations and ask him to make new ones for this merit badge. August 17, 2014 - Joe and @Scouter Paul - The 2014 cookbook clearly states before requirements 5.6 and 7 that compliance with these requirements only counts for the Culinary Merit Badge. August 18, 2014 - Scouter Paul@Joe - Thank you for this new m.b. Jan 06, 2015 - HappyHitchhikerOur troop has a culinary merit leader who believes that the badge should take a whole year to complete. I looked at the list and I can't see why it would take so long. Should it take so long? January 6, 2015 - Scouter Paul@Happy - There are only a few merit badges that have specified time periods such as Personal Fitness, and none of them are close to a year. Any other merit badge takes only the time it takes the scout to complete all requirements. It seems to me that a scout could complete cooking in 3 days, since the meals cooked outdoors are the most. February 2, 2015 - Doug StanleyReading through previous posts confirms my experiences in facilitating this merit badge. A) It is challenging to put your mind around what needs to be planned and actually produced. For me, I've developed a Look to track every scout. B) This MB can take a long time to complete depending on the involvement of the Troop and the scout with camping and hiking. C) The overlap with the classification advances and camping MB only raises the challenge of Scout and counselor. It is notable that the 1st and 2nd req's were added when Cooking was removed from the req'd eagle list, but not removed when returned as needed. It doesn't change reality. My last question involves clarity for backpacking/walking. The req seems vague as to how many people the scout needs to cook. It is inferred in the assessment that it would be for several people, so that is my direction. Any other interpretations or general thoughts are welcome! February 2, 2015 - Scouter Paul@Doug - Application #7 says three to five people. Mar 18, 2015 - Holly SmithWe are trying to interpret how many meals need to be cooked for this MB. It is: for requirement 5 - B,L,D, dessert anywhere; requirement 6 - 3 meals (various methods) + dessert or snack outside; requirement 7 - 2 meals + snack off on the trail? The Workbook makes you confused because there are spaces for 5 meals to be evaluated under requirement 6, making it look like 5 meals need to be cooked. One of our MB advisors is saying that only 1 meal needs to be cooked outdoors. March 18, 2015 - Scout Paul@Holly - #5c says a breakfast, lunch, dinner and dessert - are 3 meals. #6c says cook two of the meals - it's two meals. #6d says cook one of the meals - that's 1 meal. #7c says serve two meals and a snack - it's two meals. So I'd say a total of 8 meals, 1 dessert, and 1 snack. #6c, d and specifically say outdoor #7c says during a hiking or backpacking trip so I don't know how anyone could interpret this to mean that meals can be cooked in. March 23, 2015 - Renee ThompsonI'm returning college student and our dietary group is putting together a program to teach and help local troops with this badge of If we have good ideas, I'll share them. Jun 11, 2015 - Scout ScottAm made this badge at camp and had printed the spreadsheet in April 2014. I just noticed that a caloric column was added in in 2014 for #5, 6, and 7. I don't see where the requirements require calories to be counted. Why was it added if it is not mentioned on the requirements page? Jun 11, 2015 - Scouter Paul@Scott - The requirements have scouts show the amount of food needed for meals. Calories are a measure of energy in food and it determines the amount of food needed to be consumed for the level of activity and body size. If you have a different way of determining how much food is needed, your counselor may accept this. Spreadsheets are not a necessary part of a merit badge - they are just aids that some scouts use to aid in their progress. Jun 30, 2015 - Nancy's #5 needed to be completed at home? How can you bake or microwave? #6 & #7 say to cook outdoors. I've seen some summer camps say #5 been completed since the scout cooked for the camp counselor... Out. I've also seen summer camps that list #5 as a pre-req or post-req as it needs to be completed at home. Jul 02, 2015 - Scouter Paul@Nancy - #5 not specify where the requirement needs to be completed. It could be done at home, in BSA camps, or anywhere. A person sat in an oven of some kind and microwave in a microwave oven. July 17, 2015 - Girl Scout has been to many camps with my troop. We carry in and out all our equipment in our packaging, including food. I am a patrol leader and have planned and cooked at least a dozen meals in these campsites. Would these trips count as backpacking for requirement 7? Of course, I'd have to document the meal information. Jul 19, 2015 - Scouter Paul@Scout - If I were your merit advisor, I probably wouldn't consider these meals since you didn't make 7a, 7b or 7c for them. The idea of requirement 7 is to learn how to cook in remote areas for an extended time. This is not difficult to cook and consists mainly of heating water and reconstituting dry food. That's why the no cooling clause is in requirement. Mar 08, 2016 - JoseCan set trail hike? March 10, 2016 - Paul@Jose - Of course, walking out on a trail. Jun 07, 2016 - Dominic's How many meals do I need to plan and prepare? What is the myplate web address? Jun 09, 2016 - Laban Cabrera@Dominic OS site for myplate is www.choosemyplate.govAgreeing the CURRENT requirements (2016) you have for: Plan 18 Meals, one dessert and a snackCook 7 meals plus one dessert & a snackThis is broken as follows:#4 Plan 10 meals (plan a menu for three full days of meals (three breakfasts, three lunches, and three dinners) plus one dessert)#4c Cook 3 meals plus one dessert #5d Plan 5 meals and Cook 2 meals#6a Plan 3 meals plus a snack #6d Cook 2 meals plus one Jun 17, 2016 - dominic sMar 11, 2019 - Jeff EWith consideration of the #5 requirement, phrase or a group of similar size of up to eight young people, including you include a family outing of two adults and four young? The newsroom's a little vague. March 11, 2019 - Paul@Jeff - Three places in #5, your words and youth are used, so that excludes cooking with and for adults. The requirement #4 is specifically cooking for an adult at home, #5 is for your patrol at a campsite, #6 is for a team of backpackers that is probably a mix of young people and adults. Apr 07, 2019 - Matt CWe has a small troop with 6 scouts working on the Culinary merit badge. The six scouts can work collectively to make these camping meals and backpack trail meals - or does each scout do them individually? My problem to solve is that if they need to do them individually, we will need to have six or more multi-day camps and day hike trails. It's going to take over a year to get the Boy Scouts to do it. Your thoughts are appreciated. Apr 10, 2019 - Scouter Paul@Matt - Taking 6 months to complete a merit badge is not uncommon. Each scout needs to do individual menu planning, but I have no problem with that scout handing out work to the patrol in preparation and cleanliness. The scout needs to be in charge, managing the process, and directing his helpers. The goal is for a scout to learn how to plan, prepare, and clean after good meals for home, camp, and trail. If a scout has made Saturday meals for a camp, it's 6 months for all 6 to do so. Backpacking meals could be prepared on daily walks at any time, so that these meals could be completed in those 6 months as well. Each scout could dine for 3 people, allowing two scouts to complete the kitchen on a Saturday of a campsite. You could invite Webelos, Scout friends and other young people to meet your MB Cooking gang at a spot on a trail for lunch some Saturday, then dinner another day. Each scout would prepare a meal for 3 people, and they could all be done in just a few days. Camping and Backpack meals need to be planned as if they were used in these activities to understand the types of foods that work, but they just need to be prepared in an environment you would experience outdoors. Thus, Camp's meals could be made on a day out in a park, and backpacking meals could be made along a trail through that same park. Just have only tools and features that would be available for real. January 9, 2020 - ATL_MEWCan 5th application to be made during the backpack, or do you need to be on a camping trip in the country? January 9, 2020 - Scouter Paul@ATL - 5a can not be done separately from the rest of requirement 5. The 5a menu is used for the rest of the requirement. 5d says Use a different requirement 3 cooking method for each meal. So the scout needs to demonstrate 3 different ways to cook food, and serve it, and clean. Requirement 6 is to cook in backpack, so that shows the intention that requirement 5 is something else. But, there's nothing to stop a scout from meeting requirement 5 during the backpack - I don't think it's logistically a good idea. January 17, 2020 - Russell K. AdamsAsso professional chef and mb kitchen advisor for our troop I'm looking at him as they prepare them for at worst. Understanding food safety, temporary and proper hygiene. Whoever here didn't eat burnt chicken that was cooked. I believe the basic understanding is to allow them to think about minimal refrigeration and what we can plan to maximize food security and nutrition. I don't give this MB as candy. You'll learn a lot when I'm done with you and I'll be proud that you stayed with him. January 23, 2020 - Sachin BHello, There are 7 sections in coing badge. Is it a prerequisite that the culinary theory sections 1,2,3 and 7 need to be made before practices 4,5,6? Thank you, SachinJan 23, 2020 - Scouter Paul@Sachin - There is no need to complete the requirements in order, but they usually make sense to progress in order. August 9, 2020 - Tom ChampQuestion involves requirement 6.e. Where others rate their cuisine in a packing meal on their backs. Scout had the number of his meals evaluated on question camp trips specifically involves 6e., in our backpacking trip, Scouts bring, carry and prepare their own meals. Can scout evaluate your own meal for this 6e. Since others have evaluated their meals in different requirements and it ™ kitchen for just him or one another during the backpack. Could another count as well as other Boy Scouts? August 9, 2020 - Scouter Paul@Tom - #6a specifically states three to five people (including you) for the meal to be prepared, eaten and evaluated by at least two other scouts. October 22, 2020 - Steve the PirateCan scout work on the #5 requirement as a group or does it have to be done only by one scout at a time? October 22, 2020 - Scouter Paul@Steve - In my opinion, #5d and #5e it would make sense to have other scout or two as assistants, but the only scout who makes that badge of merit should be in charge and driving and demonstrating that they developed the culinary skills. All other sub-requirements would be done individually. Contest - Ask a Question - Add ContentEso site is not officially associated with the Boy Scouts of America
